11. The Chapter on Non-Teaching

140. "Those monks, monks, who explain what is not the Teaching as 'not the Teaching' - those monks, monks, are practising for the welfare of many people, for the happiness of many people, for the good, welfare, and happiness of many people, of gods and humans. And those monks, monks, generate much merit, and they establish this Good Teaching." The first.

141. "Those monks, monks, who explain the Teaching as 'the Teaching' - those monks, monks, are practising for the welfare of many people, for the happiness of many people, for the good, welfare, and happiness of many people, of gods and humans. And those monks, monks, generate much merit, and they establish this Good Teaching." The second.

142-149. "Those monks, monks, who explain what is not monastic discipline as 'not monastic discipline', etc. who explain monastic discipline as 'monastic discipline', etc. who explain what was not said, not spoken by the Truth-finder as 'not said, not spoken by the Truth-finder', etc. who explain what was said, spoken by the Truth-finder as 'said, spoken by the Truth-finder', etc. who explain what was not practised by the Truth-finder as 'not practised by the Truth-finder', etc. who explain what was practised by the Truth-finder as 'practised by the Truth-finder', etc. who explain what was not laid down by the Truth-finder as 'not laid down by the Truth-finder', etc. who explain what was laid down by the Truth-finder as 'laid down by the Truth-finder' - those monks, monks, are practising for the welfare of many people, for the happiness of many people, for the good, welfare, and happiness of many people, of gods and humans. And those monks, monks, generate much merit, and they establish this Good Teaching." The tenth.

The Chapter on Not the Teaching is the eleventh.
