2. The Distinction of Discourse Mixed with Consciousness

61. For whom does a mind with lust arise... etc. For whom does a mind without lust arise... For whom does a mind with hate arise... For whom does a mind without hate arise... For whom does a mind with delusion arise... For whom does a mind without delusion arise... For whom does a contracted mind arise... For whom does a distracted mind arise... For whom does an exalted mind arise... For whom does a not exalted mind arise... For whom does a surpassed mind arise... For whom does an unsurpassed mind arise... For whom does a concentrated mind arise... For whom does an unconcentrated mind arise... For whom does a liberated mind arise... For whom does an unliberated mind arise?

3. The Distinction of Higher Teaching Mixed with Consciousness

62. For whom does wholesome consciousness arise... etc. For whom does unwholesome consciousness arise... For whom does indeterminate consciousness arise... For whom does consciousness associated with pleasant feeling arise...?

(By this method, up to conflicting and non-conflicting should be extracted.)

For whom non-conflicting consciousness arises but does not cease, will non-conflicting consciousness cease but not arise for that one?

Or else, for whom non-conflicting consciousness will cease but not arise, does non-conflicting consciousness arise but not cease for that one?
